TO LOWER WHEAT PRICES

Forcing of Dardanelles Necessary

Says Head of Board of Trade. Chicago, Aug 14.-Only in the pos sible piercing of the Dardanelles lies hope of materially lower prices for wheat, according to J. P. Griffin, president of the Chicago Board of Trade. This, he said, would throw open to the consuming nations the three years' curplus grain stored in Russig. Mr Griffin cited the government figures on wheat productions to show that the principal cause of the recent jump in prices was due to insufficient produc tion, only 654,000,000 bushels being produced this year against 1,012,000,

There was a time not so many years ago when the rural districts and the villages and county seat towns seemed to have a barrier between them. There seemed to be a sort of animosity between the people of the towns and the rural districts. Socially they did not mix and there were feelings that, in many instances, kept the development of the community back. This to a very large extent has passed away. In dozens of communities during this month there will be held great community gatherings of various kinds. Many will take the form of farmers and business men picnics with crowds made up of people from the city and country. All this shows that the barrier between the town and the county is pretty well broken down. Wherever the grange is working in a community we find it interested in these gatherings, It is a good chance to do community work. Knox county is getting the spirit and will be greatly benefited in the near future.
